“ Dana once lived across the street from me and one day I walked up to her house and the door was open and the kids were going to school and I heard her singing loud broken wing by Martina McBride and I just froze and listen to her sing the whole song with such passion that it broke me and when she finished I went in there to tell her how shocked I was that she also had a great voice like her mother cuz I never heard her really sane and then I realized tears were flowing down her face as she washed the dishes and it was the first time I couldn't get her to open up and tell me what was bothering her
