“ Dr. Grogan was my Biochemistry Professor at UMSL. I still remember a funny story he told once during class about a time he was on a boat with his family. He impacted me as a student in such a positive way!

“ Don's life was so well lived that it becomes difficult to feel sadness to the point of anguish about his passing. He was a Christian man, a faithful husband, a caring parent, a quiet and modest person, never boastful, who did not have to speak his faith loudly because his life and way of being with others--family, friends, associates, and strangers as well--spoke it for him. Don was a teacher, a university professor of biochemistry, and thus his influence survives and continues in the lives of thousands of his students over dozens of years of teaching. One does not shed tears of deep sorrow and regret over Don's passing, but rather tears over the personal loss of knowing that his time on earth is finished, that you cannot again visit with him, speak with him, build with him, or learn with him . . . but you can remember him for he is a person well worth remembering. -
