“ I am Uncle Ed's niece. I was at Uncle Ed and Aunt De's house on a Saturday when I was growing up. We were working in one of the rooms installing plywood on the walls. Uncle Ed gave me a piece of plywood to measure for the wall, which needed to accommodate an outlet, and he taught me how to measure and mark the panel. I went to work with my assigned task. When Uncle Ed started to install the plywood panel, I said I wasn't sure it would fit. He didn't check my measurements; he just asked, "Did you measure it?" I answered that I did. He promptly started the saw and proceeded according to my marks. (I was REALLY hoping he wasn't going to have to replace that piece of plywood!!!!) He then placed the plywood panel on the wall, and... it fit! He just looked at me and smiled. He had the patience to teach me a new skill and the confidence that I had followed his directions. That was many years ago. I have measured many times since then and in many different ways. Thank you for the lesson, Uncle Ed. Rest in Peace.

“ Uncle Ed was my Godfather; his wife Aunt Dee was my Godmother. I always found great joy in that. Uncle Ed had a fabulous laugh, quick wit (could not keep up!) and superior intelligence. Most of all, he had profound integrity and one of the biggest, kindest hearts I have ever known. I love you, Uncle Ed. Blessed travels to your Heavenly Home.
