Johnny Moore, 65, died Monday, October 15, 2012, at his residence near Oxford, MS.

Born in Biloxi, MS, Johnny was a 1965 graduate of Biloxi High. He moved to Oxford to attend the University of Mississippi where he remained after graduation. Johnny was a devoted and loyal Ole Miss Rebel as evidenced by his participation in various activities with the Quarterback Club and much of his photography. He was an assistant Boy Scout leader and a member of the Board of Directors for the Mississippi Restaurant Association for 15+ years. Johnny was a motorcycle enthusiast, which led him to co-write several articles with Dr. C.B. Hopper on motorcycle gangs and penology. A little known fact about Johnny was that he was a nationally renowned expert on voodoo and vampirism.

He had worked for the University of Mississippi in Food Services Department for many years and, most recently, as a safety officer with Aramark. Johnny never met a stranger and had a smile for everyone. He was a Mason and a member of Emmanuel Baptist Church in Biloxi, MS.
