“ There's so much I could say about my sister Lynne, I woke up this morning and I felt like she was here with me. I miss you especially now more than ever I come close to passing not too long ago and I could see your face looking over me telling me no not yet there's so much more you have to do. Thank you for holding my hand through that once again as you did 30 something years ago then my first divorce helping me take care of my children while I had to work. I miss you Lynne my sister forever and I will see you again , Always in my HEART and on my mind. ❤️💕🌸🌻🙏🙏

“ I remember the first time I met Lynne. My brother brought her home with him to Ashland Oregon from her home in Mississippi. My Dad lifted her up and twirled her and John was so smitten. They were soon married and had their first son Tony in San Diego California. The distance and the years makes it so we really don't know each other, but Facebook has made it possible to keep in touch. I am saddened for her loss and for all who loved her through the years. I am Thankful she is with her husband, my brother in heaven and that she is not alone. It is my memory of the love she and John shared that I hold deep in my heart. God bless
