“Melanie was my first friend in Mississippi, when I moved there in 1989. She immediately took me in as part of her family and is responsible for me meeting many others, including some who also became life-long friends. Including endless hours talking and scheming at the Ole Miss Power Plant, nights spent searching for mischief around Oxford, renting a house in Thaxton and, later, trips to Atlanta and the North Georgia mountains, we had countless adventures over the years and made many memories I always will hold dear. Melanie took good care of more than a few of us and we are all the better for her influence in our lives!”
